

The Credit Card Crusade

Workshop

Gary A. McAbee

The Credit Card Crusade for Students is a workshop based on helping participants gain a basic understanding of how credit works. It is very important for everyone to know the positive effects of good credit management and the disastrous effects of bad credit management before they enter the world of credit usage. Unfortunately, many people do not know about using credit wisely and this can lead to a continuous cycle of debt.

This workshop incorporates many aspects of basic financial literacy and learning credit management skills. Part one of this workshop presents a framework for a basic understanding of how credit works. Part two provides real-world examples such as how interest rates are calculated and how credit scores rise and fall. Part three concludes with the long-term benefits of effective credit management that should be practiced daily.

After the presentation, participants will be more educated about credit cards and credit usage, and credit scores. They will also be able to teach others about credit and make good decisions about using their credit in the future.

The Credit Card Crusade workshop teaches how to...

- Establish and maintain their credit
- Understand the credit scoring system
- Learn how credit cards work
- Apply basic financial strategies to daily routines
