

The Leadership 101 Project Workshop

Gary A. McAbee

The Leadership 101 Workshop is designed for current and future leaders who are looking to become better at communicating and motivating their teams. Leaders rely on expert knowledge and practice and learn from previous experience. Today's leaders need to be active learners who seek a commitment to continuous improvement strategies.

Being an effective leader is based on blending traditional methods with new, innovative leadership skills and techniques. The Leadership 101 workshop can be presented to leaders who want to improve upon using traditional methods such as goal-setting and motivating employees. This workshop is also effective for those who want to learn current methods of leadership such as change management and root cause analysis.

To teach these principles, this workshop can be customized for your group to discuss many leadership concepts. At the end of this workshop, participants will be able to apply these success strategies immediately to become more effective leaders while building stronger, more cohesive teams. Some of the concepts of this seminar include:

-Setting Performance Goals

-Root Cause Analysis

-Emotional Intelligence

-Change Management

-ADKAR model

-SAR analysis

-Motivating employees

-Coaching and feedback

The Leadership 101 workshop is based on the concept of using leadership methods...

This workshop teaches how to master some of the common traits of successful leaders who...

- lead by example and build successful teams
- explain organizational changes, promote them, and oversee their implementation
- form good, consistent habits and use them faithfully
- seek new, creative solutions and trends
- find mentors who are successful and emulate them
